MY GRAVE.

The following verses are given by the Dublin Nation as one of the earliest pieces which came from the pen of its late editor, Thomas Davis, Esq., whose sudden and unexpected decease has lately taken place:

Shall they bury me in the deep,
Where wind-forgetting waters sleep?
Shall they dig a grave for me
Under the greenwood tree?
Or on the wild heath,
Where the wilder breath
Of the storm doth blow?
Oh, no! oh, no!

Shall they bury me in the palace tombs,
Or under the shade of cathedral domes?
Sweet 'twere to lie on Italy's shore;
Yet not there—nor in Greece, though I love it more.
In the wolf or vulture, my grave shall I find?
Shall my ashes career on the world-seeing wind?
Shall they fling my corpse in the battle mound,
Where coffinless thousands lie under the ground—
Just as they fall they are buried so?
Oh, no! oh, no!

No! on an Irish green hill side,
On an opening lawn—but not too wide:
For I love the drip of the wetted trees—
I love not the gales, but a gentle breeze,
To freshen the turf; put no tomb-stone there,
But green sods decked with daisies fair;
Nor sods too deep; but so that the dew
The matted grass-roots may trickle through.
Be my epitaph writ on my country's mind,
"He served his country, and loved his kind."

Oh! 'twere sweet unto the grave to go,
If one were sure to be buried so.

A Mother to her Forsaken Child.

My child—my first born! oh, I weep,
To think of thee—thy bitter lot!
The fair fond babe that strives to creep
Unto the breast where thou art not,
Awakes a piercing pang within,
And calls to mind thy heavy wrong.
Alas! I weep not for my sin—
To thy dark lot thy tears belong.

Thy little arms stretch forth in vain
To meet a mother's fond embrace;
Alas! in weariness or pain,
Thou gazest on a hireling's face.
I left thee in thy rosy sleep—
I dared not then kneel down to bless;
Now—now, albeit thou mayst weep,
Thou canst not to my bosom press.

My child! though beauty tint thy cheek,
A deeper die its bloom will claim,
When lips all-pitiless shall speak
Thy mournful legacy of shame.
Perchance, when love shall gently steal
To thy young breast all pure as snow,
This cruel thought shall wreck thy weal,
The mother's guilt doth lurk below.

From the New Orleans Bulletin.

Reminiscence of the Last War.

BATTLE OF FAYAL—THE BRIG GEN. ARMSTRONG.

The history of the Battle of Fayal, and the influence it had upon the Battle of New Orleans, and finally, the saving of Louisiana from the hands of the British, are not generally known. Notwithstanding it is incontrovertibly true, that had it not have been for the stubborn resistance and heroic bravery on the part of the officers and crew of the brig Gen. Armstrong, which was attacked by the enemy's boats, occasioning a delay of some ten or twelve days of the British fleet, at that time destined for New Orleans, the British would, in all probability, have taken possession of Louisiana as there was nothing at that time to prevent it, nor before the arrival of Gen. Jackson.

This will more manifestly appear by taking a view of facts as they occurred at the time. The action of the Gen. Armstrong, commanded by Capt. Samuel C. Reid, took place at the port of Fayal, in the Western Islands, under the dominion of Portugal, with the boats of three of the enemy's ships of war, consisting of the Rota, frigate, the Plantagenet, seventy-four, and the brig Carnation, on the 26th of September 1814—in which engagement the British lost between two and three hundred killed and wounded, while on the part of the Americans only two were killed and seven woundad! The above British vessels had been despatched from England, in command of Admi. Lloyd, with orders to join the fleet at Jamica, with all speed, and were destined to co-operated with it in the expedition against New Orleans. Nearly about that time Admiral Cochrane was on his way from the Chesapeake to Jamaica, expecting to find Lloyd's fleet on his arrival. Capt. Lloyd, however, with an honest zeal for His Britannic Majesty's service, on arriving off Fayal and ascertaining that a small American brig was lying in the harbor, naturally concluded that such a vessel might be useful to the expedition, being of light draft, to ascend the Mississippi and the shoaler waters of Louisiana, and immediately ordered the capture of the vessel, which terminated as above stated. Two British sloops of war, the Thais and Calypso, which arrived at Fayal after the affair, were taken into requisition by Admiral Lloyd to carry home to England the wounded, each receiving twenty-five men badly wounded. The remainder, about thirty, slightly wounded, remained in their respective ships, and proceeded on to Jamaica. When Lloyd arrived at Jamaica, and it was told to Admiral Cochrane and Gen. Packenham, what had befallen him; that he had sustained a loss of two hundred of his best men and had in consequence been detained in Fayal above ten days, they were exceedingly indignant, and loaded Lloyd with bitter reproaches.

The expedition against New Orleans had been planned by the English Government, and was conducted with the greatest secresy, long before the Americans were made aware of it. In consequence of the delay occasioned by the detention of Lloyd at Fayal, Admiral Cochran's fleet did not arrive off New Orleans until the 6th of December General Jackson arrived on the 2d of the same month. Now it is undeniable that if Cochrane and Lloyd had arrived ten days sooner, say the 25th November, the British might have marched into and taken possession of New Orleans, before the American forces could by any possibility have arrived. These facts will more conclusively appear by extracts made from both English and American authorities.

In the preface of Major A. L. Latour's Historical Memoir of the War of 1814-15, in speaking of the confident success of the English in capturing Louisiana, page 7, he says:

"At Bordeaux, at the time of the embarkation of the troops, the conquest of Louisiana was confidently spoken of as an enterprize that could not fail of succeeding, and the British officers spoke of that campaign as a party of pleasure, in which there was to be neither difficulty nor danger. It was even asserted (though I will not vouch for the truth of it) that the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Lord Castlereagh, being at Paris when the news of the burning of Washington arrived there, boasted publicly that New Orleans and Louisiana would soon be in the power of his countrymen.—Yet this formidable expedition had already sailed from Europe, when its precise object and destination were not known in America. It will be seen in the course of this memoir that about the beginning of December, the greater part of the British forces arrived on our cosat, when Gen Jackson had hardly sufficient time to make the first preparations for defence."

In showing the defenceless state of the fortifications of New Orleans and the Louisiana coast, with only six gun boats and a sloop of war to defend her shores, page 7, he says:

"Such was the inconsiderable defence that protected the shores of Louisiana, and covered a country that has an extent of coast of upwards of 600 miles, and of which even a temporary possession by an enemy might be attended with consequences baneful to the future prosperity of the Western States."

The first attempt made against New Orleans, was the 2d September, 1814, by Capt. Lockyer, of H. M. B. brig Sophia, who was sent to engage the services of the Barataria Privateersmen, and in which he was disappointed; in speaking of which, Major Latour (page 25) remarks:

"The British finding themselves disappointed in the expedition in drawing over to their interest the Barataria Privateersmen, concentrated their preparations at Pensacola and Apalachicola. In this latter place they landed not only troops but also 22,000 stand of arms, with ammunition, blankets and clothing, to be distributed among the Indians, and it was generally reported at that time, that several of their vessels had already sailed for Jamacia to take in black troops."

In speaking of the inattention of our Government to the repeated solicitations made by Com. Patterson and Gov. Claiborne, to finish the building of a flat-bottomed frigate, commenced two years befroe the battle of New Orleans, on the eastern shore of Lake Pontchartrain, Latour (page 63) says:

"It might have been thought, from the little regard that was paid to the representations of the superior officers of the district, and of our Representatives in Congress, that Louisiana was considered as a bastard child of the American family, or that to attack her was an impossibility. Yet the attack made on us was within a hair's breadth of succeeding, for had the enemy appeared a few weeks sooner, before General Jackson arrived in New Orleans, he might have entered the city with little or no opposition, there being no means of resisting him; and, however well inclined the citizens were to defend themselves, it would have been impossible to prevent the taking of the city."

On the 16th day of December, Gen. Jackson wrote to the Secretary of war, that neither the Kentucky or Tennessee troops had yet arrived, and that he was putting the river below in the best possible state of defence. In the Appendix of Maj. Latour's work, is found an anonymus letter dated Pensacola, 5th December, 1814, directed Com. Patterson, informing him of the arrival of Admiral Cochrane and his fleet, consisting of about eighty vessels, on the day previous.

In speaking of the "affair of the 23d December," Latour (page 112) says:

"The result of the affair of the 23d, was the saving of Lousiana, for it cannot be doubted, but that the enemy, had he not been attacked with such impetuosity, when he had hardly effected his disembarkation, would, that very night, or early next morning, have marched against the city, which was not then covered by any fortification, and was defended by hardly 5,000 men; mostly militia, who could not, in the open field, have withstood disciplined troops, accustomed to the use of the bayonet, a weapon with which most of the militia were unprovided."

If, then, the British came so near taking possession on the 23d of December, with about 5,000 men to defend it, is it not impossible to deny that they could have taken the city, had they but arrived a few days earlier?

It will be perceived, in citing the English authority, from "a narrative of the campaigns of the British army at Washington, Baltimore and New Orleans," "by an English officer, who served in the expedition," that there is little or no difference in regard to facts and dates, and, indeed, opinions; and that it strongly supports the position taken in regard to the battle of Faval. This British officer says:

"On the 3d of August, 1814, the fleet at Bermuda got under weigh for the Chesapeake, Admiral Cochrane leading in the Tonnant, of 80 guns: arrived in the Chesapeake on the 15th, joined by Admiral Cockburn—the fleet consisted of 20 sail. The British took possession and burnt Washington on the 24th of August. On the 10th September, Cochrane sailed, as it was given out, for Halifax (though he really sailed for Jamaica) in the Tonnant, from Patuxent, in company with several frigates."

"On the 6th October," he says, (page 204) "the British fleet sailed from the Chesapeake, and arrived at Port Royal, Jamaica, 2d November."

At page 242, he says:

"At length on the 17th we got under weigh and stood to sea, coasting along with a fair wind, we arrived on the 19th Nov. at Negril Bay, Jamaica, the place of readezvous for the whole armament. Here we found a great part of the fleet at anchor, the horses landed, and every thing in a state which promised some delay. Neither Sir Admiral Cochrane, who was expected to join us with reinforcements from England, nor Admiral Malcombe, were in the bay, and the command remained with the captain of the 'Asia.' In this state, affairs continued until the 24th November, when about 9 A. M., the topmasts of a numerous squadron could be discerned over the Eastern promontory, and as they gradually neared we were able to see the flags of Sir Ad. Cochrane and Malcomb, and at last beheld the 'Tonnant' and 'Royal Oak,' accompanied by a large fleet of troop-ships and transports. The intelligence brought us, was likewise interesting, for it informed us of the point whither we were to proceed, and it was soon known throughout the fleet, that the conquest of New Orleans was the object in view."

In continuation, he says, page 244:

"On the 25th and 26th November, the fleet got under way from Negril Bay, for New Orleans, consisting of upwards of fifty sail; on the 6th and 10th Dec. they arrived off the Chandeleur Islands, near the entrance of Lake Borgne."

In speaking of the plans of Admiral Cochrane and Gen. Keane, p. 260, he says:

"Trusting, therefore, that the object of the enterprise was unknown to the Americans, Sir Admiral Cochrane and Gen. Keane, determined to effect a landing somewhere on the banks of the lake, and pushing on, to take possession of the town before any effectual preparation could be made for its defence."

In commenting on the causes which led to the defeat of the British army, page 375, he remarks:

"But the primary cause of this defeat may be traced to a source more distant than any I have mentioned—I mean the disclosures of our designs to the enemy. How this occurred I shall not take it upon me to declare, though several rumors, bearing at least the guise of probability, have been circulated. The atatck upon New Orleans was professedly a secret expedition; so secret, indeed, that it was not communicated to the inferior officers and soldiers in the armament, till immediately previous to our quitting Jamaica. That the failure is to be lamented, no one will deny, since the conquest of New Orleans would have been beyond all comparison the most valuable acquisition that could be made to the British dominions throughout the whole Western hemisphere. In the possession of that post, we should have kept the entire Southern trade in check, and furnished means of commerce to our merchants, of incalculable value."

According to the account of this British Officer then, Admiral Cochrane had sailed from Patuxet, as early as the 19th September, to prepare and concentrate his forces at Jamaica, although he gave out that he had sailed for Halifax. That on the 6th October, the fleet in the Chesapeake sailed for Jamaica, and arrived on the 2d November! that when the British officer arrived seventeen days afterwards, viz: the 19th November, he found the greater part of the fleet, but Admiral Cochrane was absent, and a great delay was occasioned in consequence. It was expected that Admiral Cochrane would have been there with a reinforcement, and in this state of affairs they continued until the 25th of November, when Admiral Cochrane arrived with a large fleet of troop ships and transports.

The officer does not mention what caused the delay, because it was kept secret: the vessels even which sailed from Fayal, were not permitted to convey letters from that port to England, nor were the English people ever informed of the battle of Fayal until the news reached them by the American papers. It is indisputable then, that Cochrane was waiting for Lloyd from the 2d November, and was daily expecting him; but becoming uneasy put to sea to look after him. This is a fair construction for Cochrane did not come from England with the fleet, though he arrived with it. Had not Floyd's fleet therefore stopped at Fayal, it would have arrived at Negril Bay some ten or twelve days sooner—and consequently Cochran would have arrived at New Orleans on or before the 25th of November, instead of arriving only at Jamacia on that day. And thus the battle of Fayal seems to have been an act of Providence, to have rescued us from our enemy.

Napoleon and a Granadier.

The following is related in a letter from Brussels to the Boston Atlas:

The Allee Verte is a fine, long avenue, with a tripple row of lime trees, which were spread by Marshal Saxe, at the entreaty of the ladies of Brussels, when he besieged the city; displaying more galantry than Wellington, who cut down the Bouis de Bonlogne, regardless of the petitions of the Parisian ladies. In 1815, that memorable year when Rome, Amsterdam, Cuatzic' Antwerp and Paris, were cities of the same proud Empire, Napoleon brought his young bride to Brussels, and was recieved with great enthusiasm and pomp.

On the morning after his arrival, mounted on a white horse, he reviewed the troops of the garrisen in the Allee Verte, and as the different regiments defiled before him, remarked a granadier who bore the chevrons of a sergeant-major. Tall and erect, his black eyes blazed, like stars; from a face bronzed by twenty campaigns, while an enormous moustache rendered his appearance still more formidable or bizarre. When the line was reformed, the Emperor rode up to the regiment of granadiers, and called the sergeant to the front. The heart of the old soldier beat high, and his cheeks glowed.

"I have seen you before," said Napoleon—"your name?"

"Noel, sire," he answered, with a faltering voice.

"Were you not in the army of Italy?"

"Yes, sire, drummer at the Bridge of Arcole."

"And you became sergeant major?"

"At Maregne, sire."

"But since?"

"I have taken my share of all the great battles."

The Emperor waived his hand, the grenadier returned to the ranks, and Napoleon spoke rapidly to the Colonel, for a few moments—the quick glances of his eyes, towards Noel, showing that he was talking of him. In fact he was one of those brave and yet calm soldiers, slaves to duty and discipline, that the Emperor loved.

He had been distinguished for his bravery in several battles, but his modesty had prevented his soliciting advancement, and he had been overlooked in the promotions. The Emperor recalled him to his side.

"You have merited the Cross of the Legion of Honor," said he, giving him the one he wore—"You are a brave man!"

The grenadier, who at this moment stood between the Colonel, could not speak, but his eyes said more than volumes. Napoleon made a sign, the drums beat a roll, there was a dead silence, and the Colonel, turning towards the new knight, who, with trembling hands, was placing his cross on his breast, said, with a loud voice—

In the name of the Emperor, respect sergeant-major Noel as sub-lieutenant in your ranks."

The regiment presented arms. Noel seemed in a dream, and only the stern, immovable features of the Emperor prevented him from falling on his knees. Another sign was made, the drums beat, and again the Colonel spoke—

"In the name of the Emperor, respect sub-lieu tenant Noel as lieutenant in your ranks."

This new thunderstroke nearly overcome the grenadier—his knees trembled, his eyes that had not been moist for more than twenty years, were filled with tears, and he was vainly endeavoring to stammer his thanks, when he heard a third roll of the drums, and the loud vosce of the Colonel—

In the name of the Emperor, respect lieutenant Noel as a captain in your ranks."

After this promotion the Emperor continued his review, with that calm, majestic air, which none who beheld ever forget—but Noel, burst into a flood of tears, fainted in the arms of his Colonel, while from the regiment, came a loud, united shout of vive L'Empereur!

Noel now resides in Brussels, an infirm old man, for he has seen nearly ninety winters, but still a devoted admirer of Napoleon. I met him at a Masonic Lodge, and learning that I was about to visit Waterloo, he kindly furnished me with much of this information.

From Havana.

By the steamer Alabama, Capt. Windle, arrived here on Saturday night, we have received Havana papers to the 16th inst. We find no news of great importance in them.

The Government was about buying an English iron steamer, for the purpose of making her a vessel of war, should she be considered adapted for such use.

The Italian Opera Company were to commence on Saturday, the 20th, with the opera of Julieta e Romeo, which will continue until the arrival of the artistes they expected from Mexico.

One of our correspondents tells us that the new sugar crop is expected to come in early in January, and that very high prices will be obtained for the first lot, especially for the yellows, which are now in great demand.

The Royal Lottery was drawn on the 11th, and the ticket that drew the $30,000 was sold at Matanzas; it was No. 17,540, and the others were No. 21,766, $12,000; No. 20,424 $6,000 and No. 13,000 $4,000.

The Spanish schooner Mariquita arrived in Havana on the 11th, and had on board Capt. Young of the American brig Edinburg, wrecked on Cays Blanco rocks. The E. had on board 500 bales of cotton, shipped for Havana.

The Gas Company have been detained in their work, on account of some failure in the receipts of the necessary materials.—N. O. Delta, Dec. 23.

Canadian Politics.

The Montreal papers of the 27th ult. mention the rumor of political troubles in Canada. There is a divison in the cabinet council, and there is likely to be a dissolution of that body. The Montreal Herald says:

We believe that during the summer there was but slight appearance of antagonism; but since the latter end of October, it began to assume a definite form, and now almost amounts to a positive breach. The principal personages who are thus opposed to each other are, the Hon. Mr. Vizer, (the leading French Canadian member, President of the Council,) and the Honorable Receiver Gen. Morris. Both men have been before the public for a generation, and their personal characters are consequently well known. Mr. Vizer is an obstinate old gentleman, wedded to his opinions, upon whom wheedling nor abuse has no effect. If his previous life had given no evidence of his impracticability and headlessness of reason, the last two years would afford it in abundance. for we believe that no man has been more systematically blackguarded by the Lafontaine people, and no man has cared less for it. Mr. Morris is another just such.

Now we grieve to have to say it, but the truth must be told, no sooner was Lord Metcalfe's back turned, than these two men allowed their personal interests to sway them so far as to affect their seats in the council of their country. We deeply regret to have to record it, but it is best to let the truth be known.

Yankee Expedition to Oregon.

The Newburyport Herald of the 21st ult., gives the following intelligence relative to the fitting out of an expedition to Oregon. It is Yankee throughout:

The Oregon expedition, to which we alluded a few days ago as being in embryo, has been made up, and the brig Henry, of 153 tons has been purchased in Salem. Capt Kilborn leaves for Salem to day for the purpose of bringing her round here for equipment. Messrs. Cushing and Johnson, the owners of the Chenamus, now running as a packet between the Sandwich Islands and the Columbia river, and several of our traders and mechanics have taken an interest in the expedition. Dr. White, the delegate from Oregon at Washington, has engaged passage in the vessel, and Dr. Watson of this town, will also take passage in her. It is probable that several of our enterprising young men may seek their fortunes in that new country, which is destined in the next generation, undoubtedly, to be a great mart of trade.

Important from St. Domingo.

The New York Herald says: We have received, the following important intelligence from the Dominican Republic, by an arrival at Charleston.

It appears that the Haytiens are beaten, and seem wholly incapable of contending against the Dominicans. Our next accounts will probably be of a decisive battle between the two races for the mastery. The whole island is destined to slip from the hands of the blacks.

From the Charleston Patriot, Dec 28.

We learn from Captain Robinson, of the schr, Larch arrived, this morning from Port Pieax (St. Domingo,) in distress—that previous to his departure, the French army had returned from the Spanish part of the Island to the Cape, and that the Dominicans had taken charge of the forts on the frontiers, and put all the Haytiens, about 150 men, composing the garrison, to death.

Pennsylvania Legislature.

The Pennsylvania Legislature is now in session; it commenced yesterday, and the highly interesting and important subjects which are before Congress, and those which must arise at Harrisburg, will, together, impart a value to the events of the coming months of no ordinary excitement.

At Harrisburgh, at least two matters will engage the attention of the Legislature, of peculiar interest in the present juncture of public affairs; we allude to the Right of Way for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and the project for a continuous Pennsylvania Railroad from Philadelphia to this city Whether the debates at Washington threaten war, or may terminate in peace, it is certain that a wise nation should be prepared for either contingency; and nothing is of more absolute necessity to our country, that to have extended and connecting routes, for safe and expeditious transportation connecting the East and the West, and affording a passage and facility in all our national movements for defence or the communication of intelligence. The members of our State Legislature will unquestionably bear these considerations in their minds, and both out of regard to local and State utility, and, above all, from the absolute need of such works in the present crisis of national affairs, we ought to anticipate a prompt Legislative action in favor of these improvements.

On the subject of our relations with Great Britain, however, the hopes or fears of persons may vary yet, as to the result of the questions which are in agitation, it is premature to form a decided judgment. At Washington, among the most able statesmen, it does not seem to be thought that war will take place. And, in what we have said concerning the action of the Pennsylvania Legislature on the Railroad applications, we do not wish to be understood as intimating the least opinion, that hostilities with any foreign nation are probable; but we do allege, that the very agitation of the questions, now creating so much ardent debate in Congress, upon rights bringing us into collision with other Powers, is a warning which we should not disregard, that the East and the West should be connected by a line of sure and expeditious communication, suitable either for pacific or military transportation and passage.

Mr. Adams on the Oregon Question.

The Baltimore American of the 5th inst., contains a full report of the remarks of J. Q. Adams, in the House of Representatives, on Friday, when the question was before the House on the reference to the Committee of the Whole, of Mr. Haralson's Bill; and in relation to the speech, the American observes as follows: The speech of Mr. Adams, a full report of which we publish in this morning's American, on the subject of the Oregon controversy, created considerable sensation in the House of Representatives on Friday. It will produce an equal sensation throughout the country.

Mr Adams' great knowledge and experience in the diplomatic history of the country give no small weight to his words on this subject. It will be seen that he objects to the term "joint occupation." He insists that the Convention between the United States and Great Britain, relative to the Oregon country, is really nothing more nor less than a commercial convention; that it gives only the rights of free navigation and of free intercourse with the Indians in the country in question, but that the question of sovereignty, of right to the sail, is not, at all involved in that arrangement. That sovereignty is regarded by Mr. Adams as residing solely with the United States.

Holding these views and holding himself ready to carry them out to the fullest extent by an immediate notice of termination, as to the existing Convention, and by the subsequent occupation of the whole territory, Mr. Adams still expresses the belief that no war with England is likely to result from such measures. We are at a loss to know by what process of reasoning and inferences he arrives at this conclusion.

The notice to terminate the present Convention in reference to Oregon will, no doubt, be given, and without much delay. There will be no serious opposition to this, we presume, from any quarter. The action of the House on Mr. Douglass's bill on the 13th of this month, when it will come up as the order of the day, will give some indication of the farther measures likely to be pursued.

English Plagiarisms.

In the London "Forget Me Not," for 1846, is a story entitled "Sarah Burnett," which appeared originally in Peterson's Magazine, for January, 1846. This, for an English annual professing to be wholly original, is very small work. It is a common practice for the English journals to proclaim against this country for re-printing British publications so freely; but their conduct is even more reprehensible, for they not only steal largely, but steal without credit. The above instance is not a solitary one, though we never before knew any of the annuals to be guilty of this kind of plagiarism.

Praiseworthy Act.

John Hunter, Esq., an extensive land owner in Delaware county, New York, has presented a farm of one hundred acres to a son of the late Sheriff Steele, born since the death of his father. He had previously made a similar present to the widow. Such acts will do not a little towards making officers active in sustaining the laws. In England, if a policeman falls in the discharge of his duty, his family receives a pension from government. We have no doubt many an officer hesitates to risk his life, because he has a family which, in case of his death, would be unprovided for.

☞ A large party of settlers propose leaving Arkansas for California, next May. The chairman of the committee of arrangements gives notice in the Little Rock Gazette, that the Californians will rendezvous at Fort Smith, Arkansas, on the first Monday in April next, preparatory to taking up the line of march for the Pacific coast. Every person starting is expected to be well armed with a rifle or heavy shot gun, 16 lbs. of shot or lead, 4 lbs. of powder, &c."

President—John B. Butler.

Managers—John Anderson, Thomas Bakewell, James W. Burbridge, George W. Cass, Neville B. Craig, John L. Dawson, William Eichbaum, Saml. R. Johnston, James K. Morehead, Rees C. Townsend.

Treasurer—Thomas M. Howe.

Secretary—William Bakewell.

The Giant Skeleton.

The giant skeleton found in Tennessee, and supposed to be that of a human being, is now on exhibition in Nashville. The Union seems to think it the real skelcton of a man. In its arrangement for exhibition, it presents all the appearance of a human skeleton standing erect and measuring sixteen feet from the top of the skull bone to the bottom of the ankle bones. There is suspended by its side the skeleton of a man of ordinary size, and the contrast is truly striking. Whatever doubt may be entertained in classifying this animal there can be none as to the facts connected with its finding and resurrection. It was found at least fifty feet below the surface of the earth, and seemed to be wedged in between two rocks, and many of the large bones are broken, as if crushed between the rocks. The pelvis, for instance, is broken and crushed so that it could not be put together, and its place is supplied with wood. Although several of the important bones are missing, yet in general the corresponding ones are preserved, so that a tolerably complete skeleton has been formed.

A Thrilling Scene.

During a late storm at Turner, Maine, which uprooted forest trees and tore down houses, one of those exciting scenes occurred which we are accustomed to look for only in novels. Four young men were crossing the bridge at Twenty Mile river, when the railing was blown off, and Washington Phillips and Bradford Phillips were blown into the river. One being a good swimmer, made a rock and was safe. The other was carried over the dam, but managed to hold on to a bush and remained upon one leg, (the other being injured) an hour and a half. Every device was made to throw ropes to the drowning men, but in vain. The scene that followed cannot be described. His aged father stood on the bank of the river, beholding his youngest and darling boy five or six rods from the shore, upon one foot, knowing that he could not hold out much longer, for the water was running "feather white," and rising very fast. It was already to his knees, the storm not in the least abated, and night so fast approaching, that it was supposed in fifteen minutes more, he could not be seen from the shore. At this time, the end of the rope on the westerly side of the river was lengthened and carried down the stream, till it came in contact with the desired object. Then the greatest anxiety pervaded all present, knowing that it was the last and only chance. The drowning man seized the rope, and was soon in reach of his friends on the shore; but the moment he arrived within reach of help, his strength instantly failed, and he was helpless as an infant. He is now doing well, and will probably be about in a few days as usual.

A Horrid Den.

The treatment to which lunatics are often subjected, is scarcely credible for its atrocity. Miss Dix brought many cases of outrage to light; and the Louisville Journal has just exposed one in Kentucky. It seems that about ten years ago, a lunatic at Monticello, in that State, was sent by his family to the asylum at Lexington. On his arrival at that institution or shortly afterwards, he appeared so calm and rational that the superintendent or managers sent him home. At home, he became violent, and his family determined to dispose of him so that he should trouble them no longer. Accordingly they built, near their own residence, a very small and strong block house, and, around that, another, thus making a double block-house. They left a narrow opening, through which they thrust the lunatic, and, when he was in, they built up the opening, leaving a little orifice just large enough to admit of his food being extended to him. And if that horrid prison, for ten long years of heat and cold, the wretched lunatic has been kept by his own family, with no bed clothes, no fire, and no hope of escape except through the gate of death.

☞ A widow residing in the Bowery, New York, has for several months, under bitter expressions of poverty, been begging from her neighbors, one of whom was rather surprised a day or two since, on calling upon the object of her bounty, to find her occupying a parlor and bed-room, furnished with very rich mahogany furniture, where, among other articles, a splendid piano-forte was quite conspicuous. This hypocrite has frequently begged two cents, for the purchase of a candle or some coal,

☞ The monster steamer George Washington, three hundred and forty feet long, forty feet beam, seventy-five feet wide, including guards, and ten feet hold, was launched on Tuesday morning in New York. She will have eighty inch cylinder, monster pieces of machinery, and a twelve foot stroke. This steamer is the largest in the world, and will probably be the most magnificent.

☞ A few evenings since, a gentleman in New York, when putting a letter into the Post Office, observed that the receiving box had been stopped a short distance from the mouth, so that any letters dropped in could be easily abstracted, without finding their way into the office. He observed at the same time, two men lurking about, who doubtless were waiting to complete the operation.

☞ Mons. Collinet, the celebrated flageolet player, whose name we have often read in the English journals and novels of fashionable life, as a kind of "Frank Johnson" among quadrille parties, has arrived at New York and will soon appear in public.

☞ Mr. Daniel Van Duser, a respectable citizen and an old resident on Staten Island, N. Y., committed suicide on Saturday afternoon, in one of his own out-buildings, by shooting himself. No cause is assigned for this melancholy event.

☞ Two fashionables met in Broadway on Monday last, when one drew a cowhide from beneath his coat, and assaulted the other with great violence. The offender was arrested and held to bail.

☞ The property held by the Trinity Church in New York city, is estimated to be worth one hundred millions of dollars. Real estate, $80,000,000; other property, $20,000,000.

☞ The Detroit Daily Advertiser states that a project is on foot to establish a colony or community of the colored people, on the State or Government lands north of the Grand River, in Michigan. An agent from Xenia, Ohio, has been out to look at the country, and make a report to his brethren in that State. The purpose is to buy a large tract, equal to one of the organised counties, and settle it exclusively with the colored race.

☞ A collection was taken up in one of the churches in Boston, on Sunday night, in aid of a benevolent society. A well dressed stranger accosted one of the collectors, saying he wished to contribute his mite, fifty cents, to be taken from a five dollar Boston bill. The collector came nigh giving the change; but a look at the bill showed it to be a worthless one of a broken bank of 1837.

☞ A gentleman in London who had missed bottles of wine from his cellar, finding that an aperture had been made in the wall, sufficiently large to admit an arm and hand, placed a rat trap close to the hole, and next morning he found some human skin and a portion of the nail of a finger. His wine has not been touched since.

☞ To insult a man that you will not fight—is cowardice. If you are not willing to play strike, you shouldent play push. People should think of their gentility before they should endanger it.

☞ A damsel in Ayrshire Scotland, having two lovers, and not knowing which to prefer, settled the matter by marrying one and immediately eloping with the other.

☞ Apples should be kept above ground unless the temperature is below 20° of Fahrenhiet. They freeze at 17°. Potatoes about the same.

☞ The legislature of Alabama have magnanimously resolved that the seat of government shall be removed to no place that will not furnish a State House, without expense to the State.

The Oregon Controversy.

We can hardly be mistaken in our conviction, says the N. Y. Tribune, that the stand frankly taken by Mr. Calhoun on the Oregon Question is received by the Country with hearty approbation. Here and there a discordant note will be uttered by some eager war-dog, who, finding himself brought up against a solid wall by Mr. C.'s position and arguments, will seek to avenge his misfortune upon him whom he deems the cause of it. He will make himself heard, while the great mass of gratified, peace-loving citizens will remain quiet, and will by that quiet testify their approbation.—Mr. Calhoun has so thoroughly damaged the game of those patriotic gentlemen who were intent on riding into office on the strength of their jealous sensibility for American honor and profound devotion to our National interests, that it would be too much to ask of them an entire concealment of their chagrin. They must speak or burst. All the nice arrangements for stigmatizing the Whigs as "the British party," "British Whigs," and reviving the old sing-song about "Hartford Convention," "War Party in Peace and Peace Party in War," &c. &c., are demolished by an hour's earnest talk of the great Nullifier. It would hardly do to call him a Federalist, or 'British Whig,' and so the pack are all amiss. Very possibly many of them may never be able to luxuriate on Treasury pap at the slight cost of a hogshead of American blood for each teaspoonfull of pap; and they must be allowed full liberty to feel baffled, mortified, indignant. They may just as well take the rebuff quietly, however. Their vapid denunciations that Mr. Calhoun has killed himself as a public man, &c. &c., are not worth even the poor breath wherewith they are uttered. Mr. C. was never near the Presidency, probably never will be; but he is nearer it to-day for his course on the Oregon Question. Let time determine how justly we say so.

The Union is sadly flurried by the Carolinian's demonstration, and feels it the more that it is restrained by position from saying what it would.—It talks 'an infinite deal of nothing' on the subject, plainly betraying the distress it would fain conceal, and concludes by urging the passage of resolutions to terminate the Joint Occupation and extend our Civil Jurisdiction over our People in Oregon, saying:

"What serious objection is there to their adoption? Can gentlemen apprehend war? Can any American be afraid of war who is prepared to support the rights and honor of the country? We entertain no doubt that the President desires peace; but it must be an honorable peace." &c. &c.

The true general answer to these questions imports that every thing depends on the spirits in which measures on our part are taken, and the end they ostensibly propose. The Union most unwarrantably quotes the Albion as stating that a notice to terminate the Joint Occupancy is likely rather to hasten than to retard a settlement of the controversy. So it is, if our object is a settlement by compromise. But if we give Great Britain the required notice preparatory to asserting practically our sovereignty over 'the whole of Oregon,' whether by rendering our jurisdiction exclusive or otherwise, then the notice is a belligerent measure, and can hardly fail to result in War We on our part will not be bullied into a settlement at which our pride revolts; neither will Great Britain. She will not be legislated wholly out of a region which we have thrice offered to divide with her—the last time but recently, under the present Administration. While we are jealous of our own honor, we must not ask her to be regardless of hers, only let our Government be as averse to giving as to receiving an insult, and the difference will be settled peaceably, as it should.

☞ Samuel Rhiacar, Jr., of Burlington, N. J., presented a friend on Christmas day a watermelon sixteen inches long, which was sound, plump and green as if just taken from the vine. Nathan Stowell, a veteran horticulturist of the same place on the same day, presented to one of his lady patrons a dozen ears of green corn, preserved in as good condition for boiling as if gathered in summer.

☞ At Westchester there is a stuffed rat, of ordinary size, but the four front teeth, two upper and two lower, about an inch long each, are curved like elephant's tusks, and of a peculiar whiteness. One of the upper curves up into the jaw, the other took a contrary direction; so those of the under jaw curve indifferently.

☞ S. S. Thompson, a merchant of Lafayette, Indiana, has imported a quantity of shawls and dress goods, direct from London. It must have surprised the Londoners to receive an order from a place nearly one thousand miles from the Atlantic Coast..

☞ A short time since, a gold chain, about a yard long, was found in the stomach of a bullock, slaughtered in England. The chain was not in the slightest degree tarnished, but, when found, it was coiled up about half way.

☞ The Chinese make the sheets of their tea chest lead in the following manner:—Two men have cauldrons of melted lead constantly ready; one sits beside a smooth flat stone, several feet across, with another flat stone, to wield when necessary. The other man pours out a quantity of the melted lead, on the stationary stone, when the moveable stone is instantly placed upon it, pressing it out into a thin sheet; they are made very rapidly.

☞ A young man named Foster, respectably connected, in an affray which took place some ten days since, in a house in Milk street, Baltimore, was so dreadfully beaten, kicked and stamped upon, that upon being conveyed home he gradually sunk under the injuries he had received and expired on Friday week.

☞ The Portsmouth Journal gives an account of the chase of a fox by the locomotive on the Eastern Railroad. Poor Reynard ran like the wind for a mile or more, but was finally overtaken, and as he turned his head to escape from his pursuers, was struck by the engine wheel and crushed to death.

☞ The New Orleans Tropic of the 28th says:—The match between Stanley and Rousseau was closed yesterday—Mr Stanley having won the 14th and 15th games. The following was the score when the match ended: Stanley, 15: Rousseau, 8 drawn 8.

☞ One of our late foreign journals says that about fifty-two years ago, in roofing a house in Scotland, there was used the trunk of a tree, known in that district as "bour tree," and which was placed across the couples undivested of its bark. A few years back this house was again unroofed, and the wood alluded to, after resting high and dry for nearly fifty years, was placed in the ground to form a pillar to attach a gate to. This, to the astonishment of the neighborhood, has again taken root, and is flourishing like a "green bay tree."

☞ After a three weeks' storm at New Orleans, the weather became pleasant on the 16th, when the sun shone cheerfully.

☞ In Cape May County, N. J., there is not a single lawyer: At the last Cape May Court there were no indictments and very little civil business.

☞ A Mrs. Carlyle, of Dublin, Ireland, an independent lady, seventy-one years old, has recently commenced lecturing in England on temperance.

POLICE.—On Tuesday morning there were three cases before his Honor, two men and one woman. They were all convicted, the men for drunkenness, the woman for vagrancy.

☞ The degree of the Legion of Honor has been conferred by Louis Phillippi upon the Mandarin who concluded with the French Envoy the commercial treaty between France and China.

Twenty-ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1845.

SENATE.

After the reception of several Executive communications, in answer to resolutions, Mr. Berrian presented memorials asking appropriations for the removal of obstructions in the harbor of Savannah.

Mr. Atherton presented memorials in favor of referring the Oregon difficulties to arbitration.

Memorials were also presented for the construction of a Canal around the Falls of the Ohio.

Mr. Breese introduced a bill authorizing the President to sell the reserved mineral lands of the West.

Mr. Dickerson reported a bill for the improvement of the Hudson river.

After the passage of some private and local bills, the Senate held a short Executive session and then adjourned to Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

In the House the first business was the consideration of the motion relative to the reference of the bill reported yesterday from the military committee for the raising of two regiments of riflemen.

Mr. C. J. Ingersoll, the chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, took the floor. He applauded the speech of Mr. Adams yesterday, and said it could not fail to exert an immense pacificatory influence on both sides the Atlantic. He, Mr. I., agreed most fully with the venerable gentleman, that at present there can be no fear of war, nor can there be until the termination of the joint occupancy. Our only plan was to go on and give the notice, and leave the rest to the woman and children. (Cries of what do you mean?) Why, said he, what I mean is this: When Doctor Franklin was at the British court, and he found that all hope of peace was at an end, he turned to a gentleman near him, and said, there is no safety now but in the women and children. Our success all depends upon them, therefore go home and tell them all to go to work and get children as fast as possible. (Roars of laughter.) Yes, continued Mr. I., our only safety lies in a proper obedience to the population laws; let us give the year's notice, and the women and children will attend to the rest. (Renewed laughter.)

He went on to say, that he had just been told by a friend that the recommendation of Dr. Franklin was being fully attended to in Oregon. (Roars of laughter.) He repeated, that in giving the year's notice, there was no fear of war. It was, on the contrary, emphatically a measure of peace, and in this view he was sustained by the English paper published in New York. He furthermore expressed his belief that in the course of a few days the committee on foreign affairs would report in favor of giving the notice. He then referred to the fact that there are already in Oregon seven thousand American citizens, with their wives and children. The men had, too, American rifles, and considering the immense difficulty Great Britain would have in sending troops 20,000 miles, these seven thousand rifles were able to hold the country, and Great Britain well knew it If, however, on the giving of the notice, Great Britain should think proper to declare war on that account as some imagined, it would be a war which God and man would condemn.

Mr. Darragh, with reference to our Oregon difficulty, took the ground that nothing is to be gained by delay. He thought we had delayed the assertion of our rights long enough. He alluded to the rumored war preparations of Great Britain ever since the first cloud arose in the horizon relative to Oregon—and why, he asked, ought we not to take the same course? Ever since 1823, Great Britain had been adopting measures for the protection of her settlers in Oregon—and what, he asked, had we done? He was for dallying no longer.

Mr. King was glad the negotiation had ended.—He thought there was nothing to be gained by it.

Mr. Winthrop made a conciliatory speech, and contended that it was our best policy, if we desired to procure our rights, not to give the notice, at this time, but to permit our settlers to swell the population. By this means we should, at a future time, be in a much better condition than now to enforce our claims, should they be disputed.

Mr. Owen gave a history of the Oregon question and dissented from many of the views of the last speaker.

Mr. Baker went the whole figure for Oregon and declared that he loved every grain of sand that glittered in her moonlight shores. If England should go to war, he protested that she would very speedily be swept entirely from this continent.

Mr. McDowell next obtained the floor, but it being late the House adjourned.

The readers of the Journal must excuse us for publishing the annexed; we desire that the public should hear what our contemporaries think of us. The following is from the Germantown Gazette:—

THE PITTSBURGH WEEKLY COMMERCIAL JOURNAL.—This excellent defender of Whig principles comes to us this week considerably enlarged and otherwise much improved. It contains twenty-five columns of closely printed reading matter, besides an extended price current, Bank Note table and other Commercial news. Its mechanical execution is not inferior to that of any paper in the country. Its spirited editor possesses rare qualifications as a journalist, and is a full match for any of his political opponents. We receive the Journal regularly in two days after its publication, and on this account it is quite valuable to us.

☞ Some mornings since, five of the prisoners confined in the County Jail at Zanesville, Ohio, were discovered in an attempt to escape. They had released themselves from their irons, and had taken two or three of the bars out of the windows when fortunately the Sheriff discovered them.

☞ A late number of the Paris Constitutional says, that orders have been sent by the Minister of Marine, to all the ports, for experiments to be made in heating the boilers of steam vessels with spirits of wine instead of coals.

Another Fugitive.

By the following police report which we take from the N. O. Picayune, it will be seen that another fugitive from New York, has been found:

Yesterday, George Mason Davis, alias C. W. Davis, alias Bill Curtis, and alias George Fisher, was examined before Recorder Baldwin, on the charge of having entered the room of Mr. Maline, at the Planters' Hotel, St. Louis, and of breaking open the trunk of Mr. Arnold, on board the steamer Wapello, on her passage from Memphis to this city.

On the latter charge the prisoner was discharged the proof being deemed insufficient to commit him. Just as the first charge was about being disposed of, it was discovered that the prisoner was known to officer Bowyer, of the New York police (who is here for the pickpocket George Potter,) who, when called upon, testified that the prisoner was a fugitive from justice from the State of New York, where a true bill had been found against him under the name of George Fisher, for stealing a lot of clothing from the clerk of Tammany Hall, about two years ago.

The counsel for the prisoner, Messrs. Wolff and L. U. Gaiennie, contended that the affidavits were insufficient to detain him, and particularly that of Bowyer, because the law required in such cases that the certified copy of the indictment, or of the affidavit made against an accused, must be exhibited in order to enable the magistrate of another State to detain him for crimes committed without his jurisdiction, and that this was even indispensably necessary before the Recorder had the right to send their client to await either the requisitions of the Governors of Missouri or New York. Mr. Wolff, in a lengthy speech, cited many authorities in support of his position.

Mr. Bryne, in behalf of the prosecution, maintained that the accused should be committed, as he considered the proof sufficient to warrant his detention.

The Recorder then adjourned the further consideration of the case until Friday evening.

Of Potter, the Delta says:—"As soon as Potter saw Bowyer in the prison, he knew it was all up with him, and so terrible was his agitation that the blood started from underneath his finger nails. He will be taken back by packet, in order to prevent any recourse to the writ of habeas corpus."

The Mississip i and the Nile.

The Greeks gave the name of the Delta to this space included within the mouth of the Nile, on account of its shape resembling the letter A. The space embraced all that portion of Egypt from the site of ancient Memphis or modern Cairo, to the Mediterranean sea. It was the great alluvial formation of the Nile. It constitutes a triangle nearly equilateral, the sides of which average about eighty miles. The whole great valley of the Nile is about 900 miles long, and on average about six miles broad. Within this narrow space all that once was great in the world was centered. It was the kingdom of Egypt—the fountain of civilization—the mistress of the civilized world.

We read of the glories of Thebes and Memphis with incredulity. Their hundred brazen gates, and the sixty thousand armed men which could at all times issue from them, though they are facts related by grave historians, from Herodotus downward, seriously tax our powers of belief. But when we remember that the chosen people of heaven were but a race of uneducated shepherds, when Egypt was an enlightened kingdom—when we gaze upon the heaven-reared eternal pyramids, and explore the vast excavated temples—the builders of which are not known, and the date of which cannot be fixed—we must acknowledge that this little river, this narrow valley, have shown to mankind what man can do. To Egypt we trace all civilization—from the Egyptians we must confess we have derived most of the arts of life. Her early history is veiled in obscurity, but her monuments stand, and will, forever, the admiration and wonder of mankind.

The valley of the Nile and that of the Mississippi have often been compared, but save their fertility wherein do they resemble each other? The one is a long narrow strip of land, skirted by sandy deserts, depending for its yearly capacity to supply upon the rise of the river: the other extends in length more than fourteen hundred miles, and in breadth from the Alleghanies to the Rocky Mountains, and embraces a soil of inherent and perpetual fertility. The one is watered by a single river, without branches or tributaries—the other possesses more than eight thousand miles of navigable streams." If people who heretofore inhabited the valley of the Nile, could do so much—constructed works so stupendous, and exercise upon all succeeding time an influence so remarkable—who can say what shall be the destiny of the citizens of this great valley of the "father of waters." What is not their power—who can imagine the strength which they will yield, or the glories they will achieve?

When the great man-killer Alexander had conquered the world, he was desirous of leaving to posterity some record of his fame. The shattered walls, the ruined temples, and the falling columns of the cities which he had destroyed, must shortly disappear. He wished to impress his name upon a living and enduring monument. He had the world in which to select its site, and he chose the Delta of the Nile. The city of Alexandria was at once a testimony to his power and his sagacity. Connected by a canal with the Western opening of the Nile, it commanded the whole commerce of the valley—its galleys covered the Mediterranean, and a thousand caravans, traversing the deserts of Asia and Africa, poured into it the untold wealth of those extensive regions. For years it was the first city of the world: and after ages of wars, domestic revolutions, and foreign plunder, it is said that at its final conquest by the Lieutenant of the Caliph Omar it contained a population of 600,000.

If such was Alexandria, the capitol of Egypt, the emporium of the valley of the Nile, what may not New Orleans, the natural outlet of our great valley, become? We are not dependent upon caravans traversing the deserts; we are not bounded by the narrow limits of the Mediterranean; we have not got for our sole support 6000 square miles of territory; we are not ground down by a tyrannical government; how far, then, must we surpass the proud city of Egypt in her palmiest days. What the Atlantic and Pacific are to the Mediterranean, what the Mississippi is to the Nile, what steamships are to two-banked galleys, must this emporium be to Alexandria. The prospect before us is indeed bright and cheering. The full accomplishment of the most sanguine hopes depend only upon ourselves. Nature has done everything that is necessary—it only remains for man to do his share, and New Orleans will be the political and commercial emporium of half the world. —N. O. Delta.

☞ Last evening at dark, there were 6 feet 6 inches water in the channel, and rising. We had a continual rain during the day, so that our friends below may expect a high river, for there is no mistake this time. There will be a number of departures of steamboats to-day, for the different ports below.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER R. CLAYTON.—We learn by the officers of the steamer Josephine, that arrived on Tuesday, that the steamer R. Clayton, Capt. S. Stuart, on her way up, on Sunday afternoon, struck some floating ice at the mouth of Yellow creek, 55 miles below this city, and sunk in ten feet water.

She was heavily loaded with pig lead, hay, corn oats and whiskey; part only of which will be saved in a damaged condition. She was not insured. No lives were lost. The first engineer jumped over board, but was saved.

The Clayton was on her last trip, as a hull is now being built, intended for her machinery.

The engine may be saved, in very low water.—Her cabin furniture was brought up on the Josephine.

There is no blame attached to the pilot or other officers.

☞ It will be seen, by reference to our "Imports by the River," that 15 bbls of Molasses and 4 hhds sugar, arrived yesterday on the Harlem. 45 cents was asked for the Molasses, but we did not hear of any sales, as dealers did not feel disposed to pay so high a price.

☞ We commence to-day, our first report of Imports by the river. We intend to pay particular attention to this department of our paper. So that our subscribers can see, by a reference to our columns, the immense amount of business transacted on our rivers.

☞ The steamers Wisconsin, Josephine and Harlem arrived yesterday from below. The Allgheny, Cambria, American and Monongahela departs this morning.

☞ Part of cargo of the steamer Richard Clayton, that sunk on Sunday, was 1100 pigs of lead.

☞ The splendid steamer Monongahela. Capt. Stone, leaves this morning for Cincinnati, at 10 o'clock.

☞ The well known steamer Allegheny, Capt. Gray, leaves this morning for New Orleans, and all intermediate ports.

☞ The new steamer American, Capt, S. Smith, leaves to-day for Nashville.

☞ The Brownsville Packet steamers Consul and Louis McLane will commence their regular trips, as soon as the river above is sufficiently clear of ice to admit of navigation.

☞ The steamer Acadia, was expected up last evening. She is said to be principally loaded with Sugar and Molasses. a scarce article at the present time.

From the Tropic of the 28th.

New Orleans Market.

The transactions in our general market have been rather limited since our last report, though businesshas commenced with considerable activity in some departments, which have been the principal inducements. Sugar and Molasses, it will be perceived that brisk demand has sprung up, which is mainly to be attributed to the opening of the Ohio, and the consequent resumption of commercial intercourse with those western cities which draw their supplies from this market. A fair business has been done in Cotton, though restricted by the light stock on sale, and by the firmness with which sellers insist upon their rates. In the Tobacco market there has continued to exist a perfect calm, while Flour, after a temporary pause, has experienced a considerable falling off from the ruling rates of last week, as will be perceived by referring to our remarks below.

COTTON.—We left the cotton market in our last report, very firm, an advance of ⅛c. having been realized upon the previous week. On Friday a very good demand existed, though holders generally showed an indisposition to sell except at prices above the views of purchasers, and sales only reached 2,200 bales.

Singular Affair on Staten Island.

The following is a specimen of the "excitables" of the New York Herald. The whole statement is probably unfounded:

"We have received an extraordinary statement, signed by Eugene Burnand, formerly a resident of Staten Island, but now of this city, giving the particulars of some curious transactions, in which the names of his uncle, (by his wife's side,) the Rev. Ildefonor Medrano, (formerly a catholic priest here,) also Carlos F. Hernandez, a Spanish gentleman, and Miss Mary McKeon, together with several others, appear in a very remarkable and striking position. We decline publishing the paper, because it involves statements that might subject us to the expense of legal proceedings, even if true. It appears, however, that Mr. Medrano, the clergyman, Mr. Hernandez, and his three young children, Miss McKeon and a nurse, all embarked on board the packet ship Franconia for New Orleans, on Monday last. Mrs. Hernandez, who is a native of this city, is left behind without husband or children, and is represented to be in a state of mind bordering on distraction.

We have heard much more, together with a full history of the origin of these transactions, but forbear further at present. It seems to be an unhappy and heart-breaking affair all round—and but for the connexion which a catholic priest has in the matter, ought not to be alluded to by the press—but a public teacher makes it a public matter.

A Christian has Died.

Oliver Smith of Hatfield, Mass., a wealthy and benevolent man who died recently, has left in his Will the following bequests:

$200,000, is given to Northampton for the establishment of an agricultural school, but not to go into operation until the above named sum is doubled.

$360,000 is given to eight town, viz: Northampton, Hadley, Amherst, Hatfield, Williamsburg, Deerfield, Greenfield and Whately, as a permanent fund for the benefit of orphan children and children of the poorer classes. The fund is to be managed by trustees.

$10,000 is to go to the Colonization Society.

A RECENT CENSUS of Michigan gives a total of 304,285 inhabitants.

HAIR POWDER.—The use of hair powder was universal until it was driven out of France by republicanism, and out of England by famine. The flour used by the British army alone for whitening their heads was calculated to amount to the annual provision for fifty thousand people.

SINGULAR ENOUGH.—The Vicksburg Sentinel on the 17th inst., notices the singular fact :—A considerable rise in the Yazoo from recent rains, has made it impossible for boats to enter the mouth. The current created by the abcupt fall into the Mississippi is more than they can stem.

RICHARDS, President;—Continues to make insurance on lives, grant annuities and endowments, and accept trusts from individuals, corporate bodies, and courts of justice, and execute them agreeably to the desire of the parties, and receive deposites of money in trust or on interest.

The Company add a bonus at stated periods to the insurance for life, and on the 20th of January last, an addition was made to all policies for life, remaining in force and issued prior to January 1st, 1842, amounting to 10 per cent. on the sum insured in policies issued in 1837, 7½ per cent. on policies issued in 1838, and in rateable proportions according to their respective dates.

The chief object of an insurance for life is to provide a sum of money at the death of the party insured, for the benefit of a widow, children, friends or creditors; and it will be seen on an examination of the table of rates of the life insurance, which will be furnished by the subscriber to all who may feel an interest in the subject, that by paying a small sum to the office every year during his life, a person may secure to his family a very considerable amount at his decease.

Wherever the system of Life Insurance is properly understood, it is extensively adopted, and its great advantages to all, but more especially to those who depend on their own exertions for the support of their families, or who may be desirous to secure the payment of a sum of money to their friends, creditors or children, at their decease, which they might be otherwise unable to accomplish, that the operation of the system needs but to be explained to ensure the serious consideration of the public.

In several instances it has happened that the party insured has died shortly after, having paid only one or two instalments of the premium, when his family have received from this office the full amount for which he had insured.

Full information on this important subject may be obtained by applying, personally, or by letter (post-paid) at the office of the subscriber, the authorised agent of the Girard Life Insurance Company.

Valuable Real Estate for Sale.

THE undersigned will dispose of the following valuable Real Estate, viz:—

THIRTY ACRES OF GROUND, having an extensive front on the South bank of the Monongahela, (our principal business river where all the steamers lie, and where the heavy business of the City is done,) being the West end of the Borough of Birmingham, laid out into 220 lots of 21 by 100 feet, for Residences, and 96 by 200 feet for Manufactories, fronting on 50 feet streets, and extending back to 20 feet alleys.

TEN ACRES similarly situated and laid out, adjoining the East end of Birmingham.

THIRTY ACRES OF COAL HILL LOTS, running from near the Bridge toward Birmingham, fronting on the two Turnpikes.

These are well known as the most advantageous locations about Pittsburgh, or in the world, for Manufacturing, inexhaustible mines of Coal of the richest and best quality, at hand, and furnished much cheaper than any other place about the City, and being nearly opposite the City Steamboat landing.

For Residences, also, there are no more beautiful, healthy, and convenient locations for those engaged in business in the City; but a few minutes ride or walk from the beautiful new Wire Suspension Bridge; some of the sites commanding fine views of the two Cities, three rivers and surrounding country.

We would prefer to selling, that Capitalists would join us in the erection of manufactories and other improvements. There is a stratum of Coal beneath the surface of 12 to 15 feet in thickness. A large body of the ground also is above the common level, and valuable for making Brick. If being a portion of an undivided estate for the past forty years, has thus been kept out of the market. Could the yearly applications to purchase have been accepted, it would long since have all been sold and compactly built up. It will be sold at less than other property as near the City in other directions, (and we particularly invite those interested to compare the prices,) notwithstanding its superior advantages, and must rapidly increase in value beyond other property, as every one can see from its great resources and advantageous location, presenting an object of the most certain and lucrative investment, for manufacturing the most advantageous, and for residences the most desirable, all of which is more fully set forth and confirmed, as well as other general information in regard to it and our city, in a pamphlet issued by us, and to be had of Booksellers in this and Eastern cities. If not disposed of previously, it will be sold either in whole or in part of either one of the plots, on Monday, the 26th day of May next, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Terms moderate. O. ORMSBY GREGG,
ISAAC GREGG.

CLICKENER'S SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PILLS, for the cure of

Headache,	Giddiness,	Rheumatism,	Piles,
Dyspepsia,	Scurvy,	Small Pox,	Jaundice.
Pains in the Back,	Inward weakness,	Palpitation of the Heart,	Rising in the Throat,
Drops-y,	Asthma,	Fevers of all kinds,	Female complaints,
Measles,	Salt Rheum,	Cholera Morbus,	Coughs,
Heartburn,	Worms,	Consumption
Quinsy,	Whooping cough,	bus,	Deafness,
Fits,	Erysipelas,	Gravel,
Itchings of the Colds,	Cough,	Gout,
Skin,	Liver Complaint,	Nervous Complaints.

And a variety of other diseases arising from impurities of the blood, and obstructions in the organs of digestion.

Experience has proved that nearly every disease to which the human frame is subject originates from impurities of the Blood or Derangements of the Digestive Organs; and to secure Health we must remove those obstructions or restore blood to its natural state. This important fact has long been familiar to the world, but our natural aversion to medicine in any shape has hitherto determined us, in many cases, to prefer the disease to its cure. Now, however, the objection is effectually removed by CLICKENER'S PURGATIVE PILLS, which being completely enveloped with a coating of pure white sugar (as distinct from the internal ingredients as a nut shell from the kernel) have no taste of medicine, but are as easily swallowed as bits of candy. Moreover they neither nauseate or gripe in the slightest degree. This is occasioned by the fact that they are compounded on scientific principles and based on an intimate acquaintance with the origin of disease and the actual structure of the human system, which enables them to operate equally on all the diseased parts of the system. Thus, for example, if the Liver be affected one ingredient will operate on that particular organ, and by cleansing it of that excess of bile it is constantly discharging into the stomach, restore it to its natural state. Another will operate on the blood, and remove those impurities which have already entered into its circulation, while a third will effectually expel from the system whatever impurities may have been discharged into the stomach through the instrumentality of the other ingredients. Hence, they strike at the root of Disease, remove all impure humors (the principal cause of disease) from the body—open the pores externally and internally; promote the insensible perspiration, separate all foreign and obnoxious particles from the Chyle, ensure a free and healthy action to the heart, lungs and liver, and thereby restore health, even when every other means have failed.

The entire truth of the above can be ascertained by the trial of a single box; and their virtues are so positive and certain in restoring health that the proprietor binds himself to return the money paid for them in all cases where they do not give universal satisfaction.

PRICE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER BOX.

Principal Office, 79 and 81, Barclay st., New York.

Pittsburgh Depot is at WM. JACKSON'S Boot and Shoe Warehouse, corner of Liberty and Wood streets.

☞ Beware of an imitation article called Improved Sugar-Coated Pills, purporting to be patented, as both the pills and pretended purchase forgeries, got up by a miserable quack in New York, who, for the last four or five years has made his living by counterfeiting popular medicines.

☞ Remember Dr. C. V. Clickener is the original inventor of Sugar Coated Pills, and that nothing of the sort was ever heard of until he introduced them in June, 1843 as will be seen by the following

Dr. Wistar's Great Discovery!

IT was once said—"There is nothing new under the sun." This has been emphatically true in reference to medicine. Hundreds of pills, panaceas, expectorants and specifics, of all sorts, have been puffed into notoriety—all made mainly of the same ingredients, adding new names to those of the Materia Medica. But Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, furnishes a new medical agent—a new principle evolved from nature's own depository. It cures Asthma, Incipient Consumption, Liver complaint, and all diseases of the Lungs, when nothing else will. An honorable member of the Canadian Parliament, writes that it has cured him of asthma of ten years' standing.

A. Williams, attorney at law, 58 William street, New York, has been cured of the same disease of twenty-four years standing.

Mr. Cox, of New Jersey, makes affidavit that it cured him of a supposed consumption, after his physicians had given him up to die; and so with hundreds of others.

☞ Remember we positively, in no case, palm off unreal articles, pretended to be this invaluable remedy.

☞ Be sure to get Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry—there are imitations!

☞ The genuine Wistar's Balsam is sold in Pittsburgh by I. WILSON, Jr.,

FROM FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED LOTS IN ALLEGHENY CITY, FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale, on accomodating terms, from fifty to one hundred lots in Allegheny city, the titles to which are indisputable. These lots are twenty four feet in front, running back from eighty to one hundred and forty feet, except the corner lots, which vary from one hundred to upwards of two hundred feet front. They are pleasantly situated in the First Ward, on the bank of the Ohio river, comprising the only portion of Allegheny City suitable for a good Steamboat, or Ferry landing, and are well calculated for residences. Extensive Manufacturing establishments, or other purposes. The Omnibus from the bridge and the Village of Beaver pass the property, daily, the former at short intervals, and Coal can be procured from the opposite side of the Ohio, at any season of the year. Manufacturers can obtain the quantity of ground necessary, upon very reasonable terms, and will find it to possess peculiar advantages for such purposes. Mechanics, river men and others will find it an excellent location for the erection of dwellings. A plot of ground can be seen and further information obtained by calling upon the subscribers, on the premises.
